Yorkshire ripper brought to court

LEEDS, Jan. 6 (AFP) — The county of Yorkshire was celebrating the lifting of a cloud of fear last night, following the arrest of the supposed ripper mass murderer. Pubs in the towns of Leeds, Bradford, and the surrounding area where 13 women were murdered and mutilated in five years were alive with comment on Monday's court appearance of truck driver Peter Sutcliffe, accused of killing student Jacqueline Hill, supposed the last of the ripper's victims.

Women who had kept indoors since Jacqueline's death some seven weeks ago were out in the streets again, and appeared relaxed and cheerful. Popular relief was mingled with the desire for revenge, as shown by the angry crowd of hundreds outside the court as Sutcliffe, 35 from Bradford, was brought by police with his head covered with a blanket to the court at Dewsbury near here.

The crowd fought to get at Sutcliffe, and there were cries of "hang him." (The death penalty has been abolished in Britain and life imprisonment is now the maximum sentence possible).

Meanwhile, Sutcliffe's friends and relations proclaimed their disbelief that he could be the ripper. His wife Sonia was still under police protection for fear of reprisals but her mother, Maria Szuma, told AFP: "I will never accept it." Sonia herself was even reported to have told a neighbor that on a recent visit to Leeds her husband had told her he was afraid of the ripper. His boss described him as a good worker and added: "he appeared to be a very deep, sensitive person. Other friends described Sutcliffe, picked up by a uniformed police patrolman who spotted the false number plates on his car in Sheffield

Iraq denies counter-attack

BEIRUT, Jan. 6 (AP) — Iran claimed Tuesday it wiped out two Iraqi brigades and captured 2,000 soldiers in a counter-offensive that dislodged Iraqi forces from defense positions carved inside Iranian province of Khuzistan.

The state radio in Tehran said the tank-led onslaught of the Iranians was "so sudden that the Iraqi had no time to put up the least resistance, with all their forward-line armored units swiftly annihilated," in the Khuzistan oil province.

Iraq's state radio in Baghdad described the two-day counterattack as a "myth, existing only in the imagination of the Iranian leaders." Communiques from the Iraqi military command spoke of "attempts against our forward positions that have all been crushed."

An "authoritative Iraqi source" has denied Tehran reports of major victories against Iraq, the Kuwaiti News Agency (KUNA) reported Tuesday. "Official reports from Tehran on the success of an Iranian counter-offensive said to have begun Monday against Iraqi forces are ridiculous," KUNA quoted the source as saying.

The source added, "If it is true that the rate of fighting has stepped up in the past two days because of Iranian attacks against our positions inside Iranian territory, these dispersed and apparently uncoordinated attacks cannot be called a counter-offensive." The Iraqi army, which has been concentrated for several weeks in positions protected by heavy artillery and anti-aircraft defenses is capable of repelling any major Iranian attack," the source concluded.

Prince Abdullah

Guard bids called

By a Staff Writer

RIYADH, Jan. 6 — Prince Abdullah, second deputy premier and commander of the National Guard ordered a contract for building a township for the National Guard be released for international tender. The project includes accommodation for personnel and their families with full facilities on a turnkey basis.

A spokesman for the National Guard said Prince Abdullah had given orders to exclude agents and intermediaries, and companies interested in the project must apply directly to the guard's administration. Applicants for at least SR400 million, he said. They must submit detailed information about their financial status, experience and previous accomplishment in the construction business.

The companies can apply as a consortium although the Guard will reserve the right to ask for the formation of the best possible companies in the consortium. March 8 will be the last date to submit the bids.

Three months ago Prince Abdullah rejected all four bids made to execute the project on the basis of "unreasonable over-charging."

The project, which is one of the largest in the Kingdom, will include 2,500 homes with full support facilities. Four international companies made bids in excess of $3 billion last year. They included the U.K.-based Cementation with the lowest bid at $3.3 billion followed by Sweden's Skanska Cement Juriet at $3.4 billion, Royal Bos Kalis of the Netherlands at $3.667 billion and fourth was Austria's Universale Hoch Uod Tief Bau at $3.894 billion.

Saud delivers summit message

KUWAIT, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Kuwaiti Ruler Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah Tuesday received a message from King Khalid dealing with preparations for the forthcoming Islamic Summit Conference in Saudi Arabia. The message was conveyed to Sheikh Jaber by Foreign Minister Prince Sand Al-Faisal, who arrived here earlier in the day.

Prince Saud said he was hopeful the summit would yield positive and fruitful results. Interviewed by newsmen at the airport, he did not rule out the possibility of Arab heads of state holding a side summit during the Taif conference. He said that Arab meetings were welcome at any time and any place. The summit will be solemnly inaugurated in the Holy Haram in Mecca, Jan. 25 and the proceedings will take place the next day in Taif. It will be preceded, Jan. 17-21, by a conference of the foreign ministers of Islamic states.

Pakistan to maintain stand on Afghanistan intervention

By Shahid Orakzai
Special Correspondent

ISLAMABAD, Jan. 6 — President Zia ul Haq Tuesday dispelled apprehensions that Pakistan's latest initiative for talks with Kabul under the aegis of United Nations was a shift from its principled stand on the Afghan crisis.

"Our initiative opens up the whole problem (Afghan issue) without compromising our stand," Zia told reporters after inaugurating an international seminar on monetary and fiscal economics of Islam jointly sponsored by King Abdul Aziz University and Pakistan's government.

President Zia said Pakistan earnestly desired a solution of the Afghan problem which, "We are facing along with Muslims and other people of the free world." But he added that such a solution must be in accordance with the wishes of the Afghan people and ensure the withdrawal of Russian forces and return of 1.3 million refugees to their country.

Pakistan last week urged the U.N. secretary general to arrange a dialogue between Islamabad, Tehran and the Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan, as recommended by U.N. general assembly. Pakistan's request in letter from Foreign Minister Agha Shahi had been delivered to Kurt Waldheim presently vacationing in Florida, but a U.N. spokesman was quoted as saying that the secretary general was continuing appropriate consultations for nominating a special emissary to promote political settlement of Afghanistan.

President Zia supported the initiative saying that "options must remain open." He favored a flexible approach over rigid stand, but said it was premature to comment upon the question of recognizing the Kabul regime. Asked if Kabul insisted upon recognition prior to dialogue, President Zia said "We are not so naive." He added that, in the latest initiative Pakistan enjoyed the support of the Muslim block and a total of countries which voted for the U.N. resolution.

About his visits to Turkey, Kuwait and other Gulf states next week, Zia said it aimed at evolving a unified approach on major problems before the Islamic heads of states assemble in Mecca for a Third summit. He said talks were still in progress for ending hostilities in the Gulf, but did not elaborate.

Speaking earlier at the seminar Zia called for changing the present international economic order and added that Islam could provide a just economic order guaranteeing both freedom and sustenance to man. He said capitalism had freedom, but no sustenance while Socialism, although providing sustenance, lacked freedom. Financial experts from Muslim countries want to create an integrated Islamic economic system to meet the challenge of modern times.

Earlier President of King Abdul Aziz University, Dr. Abdullah Omar Nassef, co-sponsor of the seminar, recounted the efforts of his university for research in Islamic economics. He said that evolving a new economic system based on Islamic injunction is a challenge for the Muslim economists. The seminar, a follow up of the first held in Mecca three years back, is part of Pakistan government's celebration of the new Hijra century.

Turkey continues crackdown on terrorists

London Bureau

LONDON, Jan. 6 — The Turkish government is prepared to take all necessary measures to meet challenges from terrorist groups, Prime Minister Bulend Ulusu said in an interview with Ashary Al-Awsat newspaper Tuesday.

"We will stamp out any challenge to the security and future democracy of our country," he said in an exclusive interview. Ulusu added that the threat comes from two main sources, the "Red Terror" and the "Black Terror," and neither of these will be tolerated.

"First, we have known for many years how Communists, assisted by Russia, have attempted — sometimes successfully — to use our free and democratic trade unions and institutions to create industrial unrest in their efforts to destroy the nation's economy. Also, as is well known, these same people have been involved in much of the violence and terrorism in recent years. This we are now bringing under control."

As for the Black Terror: "The Islamic fundamentalism of Ayatollah Khomeini and the Muslim Brotherhood has no place in the modern state of Turkey. Turkey, as I have said, is a Muslim state but its constitution permits the tolerant practice of other faiths."

Asked if he had any specific information to show that the result of his government's anti-terrorism campaign was. He said in the government program the primary task is to ensure security of life and property as well as supremacy of law and order in the country.

"The figures I will give you are based on comparisons of statistical data pertaining to the 80 day period between June 24-Sept. 11, and to the following 80 day period between Sept. 12-Nov. 30.

BORDER MEETING: U.S. President-elect Ronald Reagan and Mexico President Jose Lopez-Portillo shake hands on the Cordova Bridge linking El Paso and Juarez, Mexico

To promote cooperation Reagan, Portillo meet

MEXICO, Jan. 6 (Agencies) — Monday's meeting here between U.S. President-elect Ronald Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, held in what a joint statement termed an atmosphere of friendship and respect, showed Reagan's eagerness to cement relations and alliances throughout the American continent, observers said.

The joint statement said the two men "agreed to develop bilateral mechanisms in order to make the cooperative relationship between both countries productive and beneficial." It was later indicated that the two had made tentative plans to meet again within the next six months. To accentuate the symbolic character of the encounter, Reagan and Lopez Portillo met at the middle of the area

Thorn begins four years as EEC head

BRUSSELS, Jan. 6 (R) — Gaston Thorn, multilingual politician from tiny Luxembourg, Tuesday began four years as chief executive of an expanding European Common Market. He has earned respect from other European leaders during his two decades of public life, including five years as prime minister of his country of 350,000 people. He and his 13 fellow commissioners will meet for the first time Tuesday to decide formally on distributing policy portfolios among themselves. Eight of them are veterans, having served under Britain's Roy Jenkins, who Monday bowed out by praising the way the community had held together in the past four years despite serious problems. He cited, as the achievements of his term, the establishment of the European monetary system and the commission's heightened role in community affairs.

Thorn, 52, the son of a railway worker, takes over as the community begins five years adjusting to Greek accession. During that time, it is scheduled to complete negotiations on Spain and Portugal joining, which will bring membership to 12.

Prince Salman says

Palestine remains prime issue

RIYADH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd consider the Palestinian issue as their prime cause and have already proven this through deeds, not only by words, Riyadh Governor Prince Salman said Monday. He added that Saudi Arabia is upholding the position despite the hardships it endures as a result of such a clear-cut stand.

Prince Salman was addressing a ceremony held at Fateh's office here to commemorate the 16th anniversary of the Palestinian armed struggle. He said that in retaliation to such a stance, Saudi Arabia is exposed to lies, conspiracies and exaggeration in describing its 'home conditions on the part of "numerous quarters." But Islam and Arabism make it imperative for the Kingdom never to relinquish its position, Prince Salman said. He added that he was sorry, however, that some Muslims and Arabs sometimes feel attracted by "tendencies that can only serve the enemies of Arabs and Muslims." Prince Salman said the King government and people of Saudi Arabia are adhering to the Palestinian cause.

Ever since it was created in 1965, Fateh has been a purely Palestinian movement that belongs to no party and no organization and works solely for Palestine, Prince Salman pointed out. He said the instructions of King Faisal at that time are that Saudi Arabia should cooperate with the movement without propaganda in order not to endanger it as a nascent organization. Prince Salman said "We are inseparable from the Palestinian Revolution and the Palestinian people, sharing with them whatever good or bad comes," the prince added.

Prince Salman announced the reorganization of the Popular Committee for the Welfare of the Families of Palestinian Freedom Fighters and Martyrs, except that now the committee is being renamed Popular Committee of Assistance to the Palestinian Mujahideen. He added that the prevailing circumstances had made it imperative to change the committee's name. He also said the committee was being revived in response to the desires of the Saudi people and of their Palestinian brethren living with them in the Kingdom. The committee, set up by King Faisal in 1967, will begin its new session next week. The prince hoped that soon another celebration will be held to mark the victory of the fraternal people of Palestine. He said that it is no wonder Saudi Arabia which houses the Kaaba and the Holy Prophet's mosque is sympathetic to Palestine. Al-Quds (Jerusalem) and Al-Aqsa mosque, Islam's third holiest shrine.

Rafiq Al-Natsha, Fateh's representative in Saudi Arabia, said the Palestinian people will respect their pledge in the Saudi leaders who back them out to put down weapons until Al-Quds and the entire Palestinian soil has been liberated from the Zionist grip. He said today's Palestinian fighters are the third generation since the Zionist occupation first started. He thanked King Khaled, Crown Prince Fahd, Prince Salman and all Saudis for their honorable stand towards the Palestinian cause and for their regular assistance.

Natsha said that as soon as Prince Fahd had launched his call for Jihad (holy struggle), numerous Jihad camps were opened and that "the door is still open for Jihad." He stressed that it was for the fourth time that Al-Quds fell in alien hands in 1967 when the same conditions that led to its fall in the three previous times prevailed, namely when Muslims disagreed and began fighting each other. Therefore, Al-Quds cannot be recovered without unity of ranks as was the case in the past. "Everybody is pinning great hopes on the forthcoming Third Islamic Summit Conference in Saudi Arabia," Natsha said.

Agriculture exhibit opened

JEDDAH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Mecca Governor Prince Majed opened the agricultural exhibition organized by Jeddah Municipality at the Desert Gardens on Mecca Road Tuesday. Prince Majed was received by Mayor Muhammad Said Farsi and officials and representatives of the agricultural firms participating in the show.

Prince Majed expressed his admiration for the coordination while establishing the exhibition. The Kingdom's development is not restricted to construction, but had exceeded expectations in all fields, he said.

Agriculture is vital in the lives of the people, the prince said. The agricultural development policy of the Kingdom is progressing in all its aspects, he added. Prince Majed hailed the efforts of the people in charge of beautification projects.

Mayor Farsi also emphasized the importance of the beautification projects and said the opening of the exhibition does not mean that this is the extent of these projects. There are more beautification projects to be carried out, he said.

Mayor Farsi called on the public to cooperate with the officials in charge of the projects so everyone can enjoy the benefits. Jeddah Municipality built the desert gardens and the agricultural exhibition in an area of 13 square kilometers. Saudi Arabian agricultural firms also participated in the SR 14 million exhibition.

Decisions taken by the 59th session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) recently held in Bali, Indonesia, were also endorsed, Dr. Yamani said. The Cabinet also approved a proposal by Sheikh Hassan bin Abdullah Al-Sheikh, higher education minister, on the equivalency degrees of certain universities abroad. It will resume examination of a draft agreement on scientific, technological and technical cooperation between the Kingdom and West Germany at the next session.

Council briefed on latest events

RIYADH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Crown Prince Fahd chaired a two-hour council of ministers session here Monday and briefed the ministers on "the current political situation." Information Minister Dr. Muhammad Abdo Yamani said after the meeting. The Cabinet also was briefed by Labor and Social Affairs Minister, Sheikh Ibrahim Al-Anqari, on the Arab Labor and Social Affairs Ministers Conference recently held in Tunis.

Decisions taken by the 59th session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) recently held in Bali, Indonesia, were also endorsed, Dr. Yamani said. COMMENT

By Jalal Abu Zeid
Al Medina

The life of an artist is not as easy and comfortable as some people imagine. An artist who is normally surrounded by his fans is mostly a victim of solitude whenever he is away from people's. It is interesting to note that an artist has to pay dearly for his reputation, as his reputation comes only at the cost of his nerves and comfort, and sometimes even his whole life.

Some artists are always active and remain anxious to find something new, so that their image does not dwindle in the minds of he people. In order to achieve this objective, they toil day in and day out and suffer a good deal of hardship.

On the other hand, we find some artist very successful and popular in their artistic career but equally miserable in their family life. There are yet others who crave to live like an ordinary individual, going to work, coming back home after the day's labor and then taking a stroll in the evening or a round of the market. But they fail to realize this dream owing to a permanent chase by their fans.

Apart from all this, there are many psychological factors that affect an artist and draws him in the depth of anxieties. On the screen or stage, or even while they are rendering a melody, they are gripped by a fear that they might face a flop owing to the presence of rivals in the same field. Hospital open to Saudis

By Jean Grant
Alkhabar Bureau

DHAHRAN, Jan. 6 — The King Abdul Aziz military base hospital here is now well into its first phase of operations. The hospital was visited by King Khaled in a ribbon-cutting ceremony in late November and opened to patients on December 13.

One hundred and seventy staff with 16 doctors cover most specialized areas from ophthalmology to surgery. Thirty-two of the hospital's 100 beds including those in the intensive care unit are now open. In the hospital's phased opening, the obstetrics and gynecology ward is to open in April. The hospital is to be fully operational by June.

King Abdul Aziz military base hospital is a referral hospital for the Ministry of Defense and Aviation (MODA) and serves Saudi military personnel.

The expansion plans of project director Habib Allah call for further pediatric facilities and housing for all staff on the hospital compound. At present, staff live in two housing compounds in the hospital complex and at the new Gulf center in downtown Al-Khobar.

Film processing delayed

By Muzir Muhammad Ali
JEDDAH, Jan. 6 — The demand for colored film processing and printing caused delays in the QSS (quick service system), according to the owner of a Jeddah photo shop. Limited capacity is hindering processing and printing of color photographs within one hour.

In an interview with Arab News, Ahmad Taha Nazer of the Modern Markets said that customers bringing more than one roll and pressure during weekends causes the delays. "This added to time spent in feeding rolls to the machines hinder the quick service. But apart from that, the machines process and print a color roll in only 45 minutes," he said. "People say we have no right in claim something we can not do. We can do it, but we have a limited capacity at the present," Nazer said. But still, the QSS remains the fastest processor and printer of colored films even if it takes a couple of hours, he added.

Nazer, one of the color film processing and printing pioneers in the Kingdom, started work in 1965. Being a specialist in his line of business, he has greater ambitions. It is the first shop for QSS printing and still is the only one. Though others tried they could not carry on because of various reasons, Nazer said.

"We faced many challenges but we were able to survive them," he went on. "The first difficulty comes from the processing and printing machines that were produced for the first time, and by a new company. "When we bought the equipment, we took every precaution that secures a regular service, by bringing considerable amount of spare parts under the guidance of the manufacturers. But the problems we faced were unexpected by the manufacturers themselves," he said.

A second machine that was planned for one of his other shops rescued the regularity of the QSS. "We could not operate the other machine in our downtown shop because of the electricity supply in that area is low. He added that even foreigners are surprised that such an efficient and quick service

Leader urges support
MECCA, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Sheikh Muhammad Ali Al-Harakan, secretary general of the Muslim World League, appealed to all those who will address the faithful during next Friday's collective noon prayers to devote their speeches to the Afghanistan Jihad (struggle) against the Soviet usurpers on the first anniversary of the Russian invasion of their homeland.

Harakan also called on Muslims to give material and moral assistance to their brothers in Afghanistan until they triumph over their enemies.

is available here when it is not in Europe. It is available in a few places in the United States. One has opened in the Far East, he said, but they charge three times our price here, SR 2 for every printed photograph and SR 8 for processing the film is charged by the QSS, the same as the other ordinary photo shops. "We are making sacrifices, but then we are also doing fine," he said. The idea started several years ago when business was booming in every aspect in the Kingdom. "We only needed capital to start. Competition grew and the boom subsided. Three years ago, Nazer and his partner started the quickest service, the 24-hours processing and printing. "Other shops began the service recently, so we moved a step ahead," he said. The QSS was introduced in March, 1980. It moved into two shifts starting 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. to maintain the standard when business increased.

Planners consider tent substitutes

JEDDAH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Saudi officials are trying to find substitutes to tents during pilgrimage to avoid fires. A meeting was held at the headquarters of Mena project here Monday to debate the issue. Abdul Aziz Ghandoura, director general of Mena project, said that another meeting will be held on the same subject. Representatives from the Pilgrimage Research Center, Mena project and the Advisory, administration and Engineering Consultancy Bureau took part in the meeting.

Officials discuss civil service statutes

RIYADH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — Officials of the Civil Service Board and employment directors at the Defense and Aviation Ministry met together here Monday to discuss the hastening of cooperation and coordination among them in implementing the civil service statute. The meeting was held upon the instructions of the minister, Prince Sultan, and Sheikh Turki Al-Sudairi, the head of the Civil Service Board. Speakers highlighted the advantages of decentralization in the recruitment of professionals, especially at the fifth rank and down.

Turkey receives $4.7m Islamic Bank loan

JEDDAH, Jan. 6 (SPA) — The Islamic Development Bank Monday gave Turkey $4.7 million. The money went to the Turkish Industrial Development Bank to help increase the capital of two Turkish industrial firms that produce parried wood and copper.

The assistance is to raise to 6,000 square meters the annual production capacity of the wood factory and to 18,00 tons that of the copper plant. The agreement was signed by IDB President Dr. Ahmad Muhammad Ali and representatives of the Turkish bank and the two firms.

Another development, Muhammad Ali, left here Jeddah Tuesday for Islamabad where a seminar is to be held on Islamic monetary and other economic questions.

Some 80 specialists will attend from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Jordan, Bangladesh, Malaysia, Iran, Oman, Turkey and elsewhere. The seminar, run by King Khaled bin Abdul Aziz University and the Pakistani planning ministry, will be presided over by Pakistani head of state Muhammad Zia ul Haq.

Flautist recital held in Jeddah

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, Jan. 6 — "One of the best concerts given since the inception of the Jeddah Concert Committee three years ago. "This was the general after-performance feeling of those who attended the recital given Monday night by noted French flautist, Alain Marinon, and locally based pianist Caroline Haffner. At the close of the recital the artists performed four encores, a mark of the warmth with which the audience enjoyed the concert.

The recital was the first given by the guest artist in Jeddah although he has played in numerous countries around the world, most recently Japan. It was from that country that he received as a gift the 14 carat gold flute which he uses for his performances. According to Marion, it produces a much warmer tone than the more common silver flutes. His is one of only five gold flutes in the world. Marion studied in Paris under Jean Pierre Rampal and in 1961 was winner of the International Music Competition in Geneva. Caroline Haffner is also a past winner of the competition. She took top prize in 1973.

Marion, who is Professor at the Conservatoire National Supérieur de Paris and at the International Summer Academy at Nice, has played under many renowned conductors. They include Charles Munch, Bernstein, Marinon, Vnn Karajan, Celibidach, Boulez, Maazel, Ozawa, Guilmi, Boehm, Klemperer, Salit and Mehta. Monday's program, played to a capacity audience in the auditorium of the Continental School, included sonatas by Bach and Franck, romances by Schuman and the Poulenc Sonata. Marion is the second flautist to be brought to Jeddah by the Concert Committee. The first, Spanish artist Antonio Arias, was a former pupil of Marion.

For the present season the Committee is aiming at presenting at least one concert per month, although occasionally there may be more than one. This month, for example, there probably will be two concerts — the one just finished and another at the end of the month, the Apollo's recital of Baroque Music. The artists will be baroque violinist Monica Huggett, Sophia McKenna on the oboe and Jeddah-based couple Primrose and Christopher Amander who will accompany on the cello and harpsichord.

The February concert will be performed by the Lucerne String Quartet. And in March world renowned trumpeter, Andre Bernard, will be the guest artist. It will be a return visit for Bernard, who has the rare distinction in classical music of having sold one million records.

Threatened with collapse

Begin cabinet given respite of few days

TEL AVIV, Jan. 6 (Agencies) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin gained a respite of a few days Tuesday for his government, threatened with collapse over teachers' pay demands. Finance Minister Yigael Hurrvitz said he agreed to Begin's request to withhold his resignation for "two or three days, not later than the cabinet meeting." Apparently, he was referring to the regular weekly cabinet meeting scheduled for Sunday.

Hurrvitz has threatened to quit — and in so doing, almost certainly bring down the government — if the teachers' demands are met. He says they would contradict his anti-inflation measures that have already slashed the national budget and even cut into defense spending.

"If we can't find a solution at the cabinet meeting, the education minister and myself may go home," he said, "or one of us may go home or the whole government may go home." "Going home" is Hurrvitz's euphemism for resigning.

Hurrvitz was speaking to reporters after he and Education Minister Zevulun Hammer met with Begin in search of a compromise on the teachers' demands. Hammer said nobody wanted the government to fall, and that all sorts of ideas were being examined. Meeting would go on in hopes of a solution, he said.

Should Hurrvitz resign, he would be followed by the two other members of his Rafi political faction in Begin's ruling Likud coalition, and deprive the government of its slim majority in parliament.

A source close to the prime minister's office said Tuesday that Begin was sparing no efforts to persuade Hurrvitz to stay on. But Hurrvitz reportedly wanted to quit now as if the Likud government falls, under a caretaker government no minister is allowed to resign.

The source said reports that Begin was about to resign were "premature." He added that numerous deputies outside the coalition had promised their support, preferring to back a minority government until general elections in November rather than risk losing their seat altogether.

MPs' Afghanistan visit irks British government

LONDON, Jan. 6 (Agencies) — Labor Party Members of Parliament who left here for Afghanistan Monday at the invitation of the Soviet-backed government, were accused by a Conservative London newspaper of a "betrayal of democracy."

The three members are accompanied by Muhammad Arif, secretary of the London-based friends of Afghanistan Society.

Kon Brown of Leith, Allen Roberts of Bexhill and Robert Litherland of Manchester central, were critical of the Conservative-leaning Daily Express which said:

"The visit... is a betrayal of all that this country, indeed of all that the Labor Party purports to stand for in terms of freedom and democracy."

"The Russians are intent on using them to convey a totally misleading impression of British acquiescence in the brutal annexation of Afghanistan."

A foreign office spokesman said of the MPs visit that "Britain has no substantive contact with the Karmal regime" and considers any contact which could give that regime "additional status" as inappropriate, "especially while Soviet forces, on whom they depend for support, remain in Afghanistan."

Meanwhile, British Foreign Secretary

Lord Carrington said Monday he believes strong Western reaction to the invasion of Afghanistan has made Moscow think twice before intervention in Poland.

"I would hazard a guess that one of the reasons why so far at any rate the Soviet Union has not intervened militarily in Poland is their knowledge that there would be a very sharp reaction — sharper reaction, indeed — from the West than there was the Afghanistan."

In a taped television interview with the British Broadcasting Corporation he said he thought the Soviet move into Afghanistan in Dec. 1979 had set Third world opinion against the Soviet Union and had been very damaging to East-West relations, particularly to the strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

Meanwhile, the International Red Cross has decided to set up two hospitals for Afghan refugees in the Pakistani border town of Peshawar. Under an agreement signed by Red Cross delegation chief Jean Courvoisier with the Pakistan government, the hospitals will cost $2 million.

In another development, a former politician Nematullah Pazhwak has been appointed adviser to Afghan President Karmal, Radio Kabul said.

After 'baseless report' Egypt bans Israeli newsmen

CAIRO, Jan. 6 (Agencies) — Egypt has banned all correspondents of the Jerusalem Post from entering the country following a report in the Israeli newspaper of a power struggle in Cairo, officials said Tuesday.

Clarifying an order issued Monday night, they said the ban applied to all Jerusalem Post journalists and not just the reporter who wrote the article. They described the report as lies and baseless allegations.

The report, written by Anan Safadi, a correspondent who recently visited Cairo, spoke of an imminent Egyptian Cabinet reshuffle and a struggle in the leadership. Informed sources said President Anwar Sadat was consulted before the ban was announced.

Israeli journalists have been traveling here since Sadat's 1977 visit to Israel. It is the first time any of them have been barred from the country.

The report quoted informed sources in Cairo as saying that Vice-President Hosni Mubarak has been trying to place his associates in prominent positions in the Egyptian government with the intention of building a power base. "I stand by it and I will stand by it, and you will read more," Safadi told the Associated Press. "I am saddened but I stand by it," he added.

Safadi said he returned last week from Cairo, where "sources in the inner circles of Sadat's administration" told him of the impending reshuffle. Safadi wrote that Mubarak "is engaged in a power struggle with Sadat's closest associates, if not with Sadat himself."

Mintoff visits Morocco

RABAT, Jan. 6 (AP) — Dom Mintoff, prime minister of Malta, arrived in Rabat on a four-day official visit following earlier stops in Tunisia and Algier.

"We have come to discuss with our Moroccan brothers the possibilities of strengthening economic cooperation as well as our common political positions," Mintoff said on arrival Monday night.

Turkish military promises to restore democratic rule

ANKARA, Jan. 6 (R) — Turkish military leader Gen. Kenan Evren Tuesday pledged to return the country to democracy but he said the army will not submit to internal or foreign pressure.

Gen. Evren who heads a five-man ruling National Security Council that seized power last Sept., was inaugurating a year of celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of the birth of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey. As in previous speeches, Gen. Evren did not give a timetable for a return to democracy. But he said "without yielding to any amount of internal and external pressure" military leaders would restore the supremacy of state authority and reestablish a working democracy.

The general has said he will announce the timetable for a return to parliament rule sometime this year.

The ceremony was attended by three former presidents, top military leaders, members of the military-civilian government, senior academics and foreign diplomats — the most selected gathering since the coup.

Officials close to the military council say it hopes to establish a constitution which will contain provisions to avoid the kind of political stalemate which preceded the coup. The ceremony took place in the National Assembly building, emptied of parliamentarians by the generals last Sept. Many parliamentarians have been detained and more than 50 tried, mostly for minor civil offences.

Ataturk, the general-turned-statesman, who fought to establish the modern Turkish state after the collapse of the Ottoman Empire is revered as a father-figure even 42 years after his death.

It was in Ataturk's name that the generals seized power last Sept. 12, the third military intervention since Ataturk's death in 1938.

Libya ratifies treaty with Chad

LONDON, Jan. 6 (R) — Libya Monday ratified a friendship treaty with Chad signed in Tripoli last June, the Libyan News Agency Jana reported. Libya helped Chad President Goukouni Oueddei drive the rebel troops of Defense Minister Hissene Habre from the Chad capital of N'Djamena three weeks ago after a nine-month battle for the city.

The agency quoted Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi as saying that a Libyan involvement in Chad should be within the framework of a bilateral treaty deposited with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the United Nations.

Libya's role in Chad has caused unease among the Central African country's neighbors. In New York, a U.N. spokesman said Assistant Secretary-General Gordon Sondoy has left for Chad Monday night to review a request for emergency aid.

Libyans take over embassy in China

PEKING, Jan. 6 (AFP) — The Libyan embassy here was officially transformed into a "people's bureau" of the Socialist Libyan People's Arab Jamahiriya "during a brief ceremony here Tuesday.

Arabic language teacher Abdulla El Harani, who said he was in China as a tourist, was elected president of the "people's committee" which heads the "people's bureau", in the ceremony held before several foreign journalists.

Similar ceremonies have already been held in Libyan embassies in various world capitals including Tokyo. The 15 Libyan nationals present said they aimed at setting up "direct cooperation" between the Libyan and Chinese people instead of "going through governments."

The embassy diplomats including Charge d'Affaires Muhammad Elgharri, said they had given up their diplomatic status and would inform Chinese authorities.

Egypt adjourns trial of militants

CAIRO, Jan. 6 (AFP) — The trial of 30 Egyptian militants has been recessed until Saturday by the state supreme security court here.

The 30 militants are accused of forming "a clandestine Communist Party and of breaking the ban on the formation of political parties. Defense lawyers have argued that the defendants were acquitted of similar charges on April 19.

When the trial resumes, the judges are expected to respond to defense pleas concerning the constitutionality of the law covering organization of parties.

Sadat message thanks Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 6 (Agencies) — Egyptian Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali Monday delivered a special message from President Anwar Sadat to the President of Argentina Jorge R. Videla.

The Argentine chief of state met Ghali at noon at the government house. Ghali arrived Sunday for a four-day visit. He is also scheduled to visit three other Latin American countries — Chile, his next stop Thursday.

Peru and Mexico. In his message, President Sadat expressed thanks for the "moral support" rendered by Argentina to his peaceful efforts in the Middle East. Ghali and his Argentine colleague Carlos W. Pastor will sign Wednesday an agreement on technical and scientific cooperation between the two countries.

Ghali laid a wreath at the statue of Argentina's national hero, Gen. Jose San Martin.

opened the second set with a first game break of Frawley's service and never looked back. Frawley later withdrew from the tournament doubles competition with a pulled muscle in his on-serving arm.

Top-seeded American Bill Scanlon was stretched to the limit as well, but he managed a 5-7, 6-3, 7-5 victory over tall Australian right haoder Steve Docherty.

Neither player performed up to his potential in the two hours six minutes struggle, with both spoiling winning chances. Scanlon finally broke Docherty's serve for the match in the 12th game of the third set.

Third-seeded Russell Simpson (NZ), younger brother of Jeff, had oo trouble beating 1979 junior Wimbledon runner-up David Siegler 6-4, 6-3.

Siegler, number one junior in Southern California, could not handle Simpson's accurate passing shots when he came to the net to attack.

American Bill Mafin, number one ranked junior in the world in 1975: confirmed his seventh seeding of the tournament with a comfortable 6-4, 6-4 win over Australian Alvio Gardiner.

In other first round games, Mike Estep (USA) beat fellow countryman Glen Petrovie 6-3, 6-3 and American Tony Graham lost only five games on the way to a straight sets decisioo over 18-year-old Kiwi Bruce Derlin 6-1, 6-4.

Three-times finalist Tim Gullikson was taken to three sets before beating McLain.

The 21-year-old American left-hander lost his first set to fellow countryman at 2-6, before finally clinching the match in the next two sets 6-2, 6-4.

Gullikson, winner of the tournament two years ago and losing finalist to American John Sadri last January, played well below his 96 world ranking.

The North Carolinian served erratically. Had not McCain been obviously hampered by a sore right knee, the match could easily have swung the other way.

Fifth seed Gullikson was oot the only seed to be stretched to a three setter, sixth-seeded Onny Parun (New Zealand), four times winner of this event, needed 95 minutes to eliminate young Australian Greg Whitecross 6-2, 2-6, 6-2.

Parun, now 33-year-old and nearing the end of 21 years as a professional, relied heavily on that experience to come back from a service break down in the third set to win through to the second round.

Fourth-seeded American Ferdi Taygan looked comfortable in beating in Australian Peter Campbell 6-2, 6-2 in 70 minutes. Taygan's hard hit ground strokes may well put him in contention for Sunday's final. American Chris Imayone, the eighth seed, beat Californian Lloyd Bourne 7-5, 6-1 after some anxious moments in the first set when he blew a two break advantage.

Alberto to miss crucial match

MONTEVIDEO, Jan. 6 (AFP) — Argentina will be able to field top attacker Diego Maradona if they qualify to play Uruguay in the "Mini World Cup Football final here on Saturday.

The World Cup holders heard that their prize asset might be suspended following incident between opposing players immediately after their match with Brazil.

It was suggested in football circles here that Australian referee had singled out Maradona and Alberto Tarantini of Argentina and Brazilian Palo Isidoro as being responsible for the flare-up.

The International Football Federation, however, said they had received a full report on what took place from the referee, but no names had been mentioned.

Brazil's goalkeeper Carlos Alberto is certain to miss the crucial West Germany match after injuring his left shoulder in the game against Argentina. Alberto was forced to leave the field after dividing at the feet of Daniel Valencia and was replaced by Leite.

Italy face the Netherlands, Tuesday. With little to lose, Dutch manager Jan Zwartkruis will have his mind on shaping a team still able to qualify for the World Cup finals in Spain.

The Netherlands, losing finalists in 1974 and 1978, started the current campaign disastrously, losing 2-1 to Ireland and 1-0 to Belgium. Italy's Enzo Bearzot, for a different reason, will also change his lineup.

Bearzot told newsmen: "The referee has forced me to experiment, referring to the expulsion during Saturday's match against Uruguay of two Italian players, who are barred from the game against the Dutch.

Antonio Cabrini was sent off with Uruguayan Jose Moreira for fighting and Marco Tardelli was shown the red card shortly before the end for a rough tackle. Bearzot said he would probably replace his banned players by Giuseppe Baresi and Carlo Ancelotti.

Claudio Marangoni leaves Sunderland, returns home

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AFP) — Sunderland have parted company with Argentine Claudio Marangoni, their record signing who has made only 19 league appearances in 13 months.

The 26-year-old midfielder player is returning to South America with 2.5 years of his contract still to run. Manager Ken Knightoo said: "Claudio came to see me a few weeks ago and said he was disappointed at playing in the reserves. "I talked it over with the chairman and he decided it best for all concerned if Claudio returned to South America. There is still a substantial amount outstanding, as payments were spread over 3.5 years, but there is a clause in the contract which enables us to send him back.

Marangoni cost Sunderland, £ 320,000 in December 1979 when he signed from San Lorenzo, but has played only three first division games this season.

Meanwhile, Malcolm Allison is staying oo to manage struggling English first division side Crystal Palace, but not on the long-term contract he had hoped for.

Allison, who said after Saturday's English Cup third round defeat at Manchester City, that he was looking for a five or even ten years agreement, met chairman Ray Bloye in London Monday.

The upshot is that Allison remains in charge at Selhurst Park on a day-to-day basis and that his position will be reviewed at the end of the season.

The challenge facing Reagan in the Middle East

By Michael Adams

None of the problems claiming the attention of the new administration in Washington is more urgent than the problem of the Middle East. None has a more immediate bearing on the security of the United States and of its allies in the rest of the world. It is generally agreed, moreover, that the key to the problem is in the hands of the United States.

So the world will be watching with keen interest to see whether Reagan and his associates will prove more successful than their predecessors in promoting a settlement which is acceptable to the contestants in the Middle East and which can secure the stability of a region so vital to the rest of the world.

Speculation based on the campaign promises of Governor Reagan gives little cause for optimism. His lack of experience of foreign affairs in general and the Middle East in particular, together with the pressures always at work on any candidate for high office in the United States, led him to give assurances and undertakings to the supporters of Israel which, if he tried to fulfill them, would put an Arab-Israeli settlement further out of reach than ever.

Nor is it safe to assume, with the cynicism which the workings of the American political scene do so much to encourage and justify, that these undertakings were merely given in order to win votes and will be quietly shelved now that their purpose has been achieved. The statements Reagan has made since his election show no sign of a change of heart, while among those who he has chosen as his political advisers there are several who are conspicuous for the unfailing support they have given in the past to successive governments in Israel.

There is, however, one factor which suggests that the Reagan administration might take a different and a more robust approach to the Middle East than the one which led President Carter into such a quagmire of indecision. Reagan clearly represents a particular brand of American conservatism, a conservatism based on certain clear-cut, uncomplicated and deeply held convictions about the way to run an efficient outfit, whether the outfit happens to be a corporation or a state or the government of the United States of America.

And if he approaches the task of government in that spirit it seems likely that Reagan will put before the American people a clearer conception of what he believes to be the national interest than Carter ever succeeded in doing, and that he will be less patient than Carter with anyone who obstructs him in pursuing it.

All this has a direct bearing on the future of American policy in the Middle East. For in so far as Carter could be said to have a policy for resolving the Arab-Israeli dispute, it was Israel's Begin who prevented him from carrying it out. If Carter said there ought to be a homeland for the Palestinians, Begin made him eat his words. If Carter said he had reached an agreement with Begin and that there were to be no more Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank, Begin swiftly — and none too politely — disabused him. And when Carter took his courage in both hands and told the American delegate to vote for a Security Council resolution condemning Israel, it took only 48 hours for Begin to force him to change his mind — and to make him look to the world like an incompetent fool.

This was embarrassing for Carter — but it was also galling for many Americans who resented seeing their country and its elected leader so rudely defied. During the last year of the Carter administration, many of them also saw that American policy in the Middle East was not achieving its declared objectives but that, on the contrary, it was encouraging Israel to maintain an attitude which put American interests at risk.

In a recently published paper on American interests in the Middle East (Middle East Institute, Washington), Dr. Seth Tillman has addressed himself to the question of what those interests are and how they might best be attained. The United States, says Tillman, has four fundamental interests in the Middle East, which he identifies as:

1. reliable access, at tolerable prices, to oil from the Arabian peninsula;
2. the survival and security of the state of Israel;
3. the avoidance of confrontation with the Soviet Union;
4. the fulfillment of certain principles, such as the peaceful settlement of disputes, the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and the right of peoples to self-determination.

In trying to shape a policy based on these national interests, successive presidents of the United States (Tillman points out) have run into opposition from the pro-Israel lobby and have been compelled to make what he calls "a difficult choice, between adopting policies weighted on the side of Israeli wishes at the expense of other national interests and attempting to frame policies based on the totality of American interests, with resulting controversy and political risk to themselves."

Despite the inhibiting effect of these pressures, Tillman says that behind all the arguments and recriminations a quiet consensus has emerged among moderates in the Arab world, the United States and Europe, "with some minority support in Israel as well," about the essentials for a peace settlement. These he identifies as:

1. Israeli withdrawal to the 1967 borders;
2. Palestinian self-determination, in exchange for explicit recognition of Israel's right to exist;
3. Some form of Arab sovereignty over the holy places in Jerusalem;
4. demilitarized zones around Israel's borders, with international protection and guarantees.

He places particular emphasis on two of these basic requirements: Palestinian self-determination and international guarantees. Israel, he says, is too small and too dependent on outside aid to be able indefinitely to hold down an unwilling Palestinian population; it cannot escape the fact that "its future is in coming to terms with its rival claimant, the Holy Land, in accepting the legitimacy of Palestinian nationalism." Recalling that Ben Gurion in 1971 urged a return to the 1967 borders, Tillman quotes the former Israeli prime minister's dictum that "Real peace with our Arab neighbors — mutual trust and friendship — that is the only true security". And he emphasizes that in addition to categorical assurances and undertakings from the Arabs, the whole agreement should be safeguarded by "a solid, explicit system of international guarantees ... including, if Israel so desires, a bilateral treaty between Israel and the United States guaranteeing Israel's independence and territory."

For the government of the United States, Tillman observes, "the problem is not what to do but how to do it." Since a consensus already exists about the requirements for a settlement, and since the United States clearly possesses the influence to bring it about, the United States should not shrink if necessary from imposing a settlement which is in Israel's own best interests as well as satisfying the legitimate demands of the Palestinians — and which will at the same time achieve those fundamental objectives of American policy which Tillman took as his starting point.

Previous American administrations, he remarks, have refused to do this or to use the leverage which they could exert to obtain Israeli compliance, not because of any moral scruples but "because American office holders, fearing political reprisal, have acquiesced in the prohibition". And he points out that the result of America's unwillingness to use its influence to impose a just settlement is that Israel has so far been able to impose an unjust one, based on Israeli military preponderance and the denial of Palestinian self-determination.

Past American efforts to achieve a settlement in the Middle East which would advance American interests as well as reconciling those of the parties to the dispute have failed, Tillman concludes, because the pro-Israel lobby has been powerful enough to frustrate them in the domestic political arena in the United States. To overcome this obstacle, he says, will require "a sustained, purposeful campaign by the president and any other elected leaders who might care to step forward to educate the American people in the realities of the Middle East, the nature of American interests in the region, the relationship of these interests to each other, and the necessity of a policy that harmonizes these so far as possible."

This is the challenge facing the new administration in the United States. Is Reagan the man to grapple with it and to succeed where Carter and others so signally failed? Much will depend on the answer.

Solution to Northern Ireland problem still far off

By Barry White

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Now that the hunger strike at Maze prison has been called off, with both the strikers and the British government claiming victory, the spotlight switches to the political scene, where there is more movement than has been seen for many years.

It is not that the rival parties inside Northern Ireland are any better disposed to one another. The British staged a series of talks earlier last year on the possibility of re-establishing a provincial assembly, but the main Protestant Party, the Official Unionists, did not bother to turn up and the attempt was finally abandoned. The difference in day is that the British are participating themselves, without help from Northern Ireland politicians, and have brought the government of the Irish Republic into the picture.

This became clear following a high-powered summit meeting in Dublin, Ireland earlier last month, when British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Irish Premier Charles Haughey, agreed to set up joint studies of various aspects of Anglo-Irish relations, intended to explore "the totality of relationships" between the two states. Neither has been willing to spell out the precise meaning, but hints have been dropped of an Anglo-Irish friendship treaty, with institutions to improve North-South cooperation in Ireland. Mrs. Thatcher explained away the presence of Lord Carrington, the foreign secretary, and Sir Geoffrey Howe, the chancellor of exchequer, in her party as consistent with any meeting between heads of government of two member states of the European Community, but politicians in London and Belfast were unimpressed. The two men are her closest advisers in the cabinet and Carrington, who extracted Britain from Zimbabwe, is known to be eager to add Ireland to his list of battle honors.

The final communiqué was a model of diplomatic sobriety, providing both government heads with something to boast about. Mrs. Thatcher received Haughey's tacit support for her hard-line attitude to the hunger strike and North-South security cooperation, while the Irishman obtained a formal recognition that Dublin had an important role to play in any solution to the Northern Ireland problem. This was acknowledged in negotiations leading to the establishment of the short-lived power-sharing executive in Ulster in 1974. But since then the so-called "Irish dimension" has been on ice, because of Protestant hostility. Now, without any prior consultation, Britain has agreed to joint studies at ministerial level, and Unionists are understandably worried.

While Mrs. Thatcher argues that she was dealing with Haughey as prime minister of the United Kingdom, including Northern Ireland, and is interested in institutional, not constitutional change, Haughey made no secret of his view that "everything is on the table." Both sides apparently are prepared to agree to disagree on this score, leaving Haughey free to claim a political victory that may help him win the election expected next year, despite economic disasters. Meanwhile the shock waves of the Dublin summit are still sweeping Ulster politics, and Catholic Nationalists are pleased as Protestant Unionists are displeased. The plan for continued consultation between the two governments closely resembles the policy of the mainly Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party — not surprising, as its leader, John Hume advises the Irish premier on northern affairs — and this has increased Protestant fears of a "sellout" by Britain. But Mrs. Thatcher, unlike previous prime ministers, may not be so easily intimidated by angry Protestant politicians, and all signs are that she is determined to open up the Irish question to wider discussion. Her difficulty will come if and when she attempts to impose any new institutional links between North and South, against Protestant opposition. British governments have always insisted on democratic decisions on Ulster, requiring majority consent, and there is nothing to suggest that the Protestants are any better disposed toward links with the republic in the South.

This is where the best-laid plans of Dublin and London may eventually come to grief, but observers believe that in the meantime Britain will try to persuade northern Protestants that their best interests may lie in a closer relationship with the republic. Despite official denials, there is little doubt that most British politicians would be glad to rid of the Ulster milstone currently costing $2.5 billion in support grants, if they could see an honorable way of doing so. Their problem is that they are faced with a two-third majority which desires closer integration, not cessation of hostilities, and has the capacity, through its own paramilitary forces, to wage a destructive civil war. In these circumstances the British cannot leave without being asked by both sides and leaving a relatively peaceful country behind.

The situation is complicated by the fact that both parts of Ireland are victims of the world recession and are even less capable of contemplating any change for the worse in their economic circumstances. Northern Ireland needs vast sums of British money to keep unemployment down to 16 per cent and the republic, without Britain's oil, has enough problems of its own without taking on a pro-northern neighbor. Ironically, membership in the Common Market has helped to drive Northern Ireland and the republic apart, since the Irish punt, once level with the pound sterling is now worth 20 per cent less.

Clearly there are no easy or early solutions to the problem, however much the British and Irish governments may agree on the most desirable outcome. There is strong support in the British Foreign Office for a federal system within the island of Ireland, with two virtually autonomous states and only a few areas of common interest. Alternatively, others would like to see recognition of the special relationship between Britain and Ireland in an Anglo-Irish partnership, similar to the Franco-German alliance which has helped to bury old enmities. But if the governments continue on their present course — and Thatcher has moved a long way in 18 months — relationships between the two islands, and between North and South, must change. The Protestants have one guarantee, which they cling to: that they can maintain the British link so long as a majority want it. But they cannot stop the sovereign power changing the nature of the link and that is what Thatcher is embarked upon, in the hope that it might change Protestant attitude in the long term.

Meanwhile, the Provisional IRA, which has always proved itself capable of wrecking any British initiative in Northern Ireland, is at its lowest ebb, following the hunger strike. It remains to be seen if the prisoners will wear prison-issued civilian clothes, or do prison work, for the brief period demanded by the government, but the fact remains that the seven strikers gave in without being granted "political" status, making them different from other convicts. The H-Block Campaign, so named because of the plan of the prison blocks, failed to win the hearts and minds of the Catholic community, because it was linked to violence.

Northern Ireland is at another watershed in its 60-year history, from which it can either move slowly forward or slide rapidly downhill. The pessimists are almost always right, in such a deeply divided community, but much further ahead there is reason to hope that, as one author has put it, the situation may change sufficiently to make talk of solutions realistic. — (LAT)

GREECE'S EEC TEST

From the beginning of this year, Greece has become the 10th member of the European Economic Community. The country's road toward this further integration with Western Europe has been long and arduous. One of the major obstacles in its way, the absence of democracy when the country was run by the military, ended only to give rise to another, the country's alienation from NATO following the crisis in Cyprus. Now at last, and before both Portugal and Spain, which are awaiting their turn to join, Greece takes its place both in the EEC and as full member of NATO.

Greece's first few years in the EEC are expected to be difficult. The country's economy, relatively underdeveloped, will be severely strained, and its population will have to adjust to new conditions and restrictions. Yet this is a test Greece found it had to undergo, if its situation in Europe was not to remain marginal. The other alternatives were either for it to struggle alone and under increasingly mounting odds, or to turn East for help: But both of these were out of the question.

Greece's entry into the Common Market as a full member will, incidentally, have special significance for the Arab world. The country never recognized Israel, despite all the pressures on it to do so. It is therefore expected to join that side within the EEC which has been pushing for a more equitable and resolute approach on the question of Palestine.

Saudi Arabian Press Review

A majority of newspapers Tuesday led with a report on the rain-seeking prayer performed by King Khalid and Muslims of the Kingdom Monday. Okaz used its headline story to cover the weekly meeting of the Council of Ministers, which was held Monday under the chairmanship of Crown Prince Fahd in review the current political situation. The celebrations held in Riyadh Monday on the 16th anniversary of the Palestinian revolution figured prominently in Al-Jazirah's lead story. Governor of Riyadh Prince Salman, who patronized the function, said that the Popular Committee for the Welfare of the families of Palestinian freedom-fighters and martyrs would be renamed as the Popular Committee for the assistance of Palestinian Freedom-Fighters, in view of the changed circumstances and in response to the wishes of the people of Saudi Arabia and Palestine. In a lead story, Al-Riyadh gave prominence to a message King Khalid has received from Sheikh Zayed ibn Sultan Al Nahyan, president of the United Arab Emirates.

Al-Jazirah gave front-page coverage to British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington's remark that the European Middle East initiative does not aim to complement the idea of so-called autonomy for the Palestinian people. In a page one story, Al-Yom reported a wave of popular and official resentment gripping Egypt for its non-participation in the upcoming Islamic summit conference. Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal's shuttle to Kuwait with King Khalid's message to the ruler of Kuwait found front-page coverage in Okaz, while Al-Madina highlighted Kabul's reported agreement to negotiate with Pakistan and Iran for the solution of regional problems.

Newspaper editorials concentrated on the Palestinian revolution and its confrontation with the Zionist enemy. Some also discussed the Afghanistan crisis and the forthcoming Islamic summit conference in Mecca. Okaz noted that the Palestinian revolution, with all the support that it enjoys from Arab, Islamic and other countries of the world, bear major responsibilities toward the liberation of Palestine. As an entity, the Palestinian revolution expresses the will and determination of the people of Palestine to restore their legitimate rights to sovereignty, the paper said, adding that the realization of this aim would necessitate further positive action at political and military levels.

Discussing the situation in Afghanistan, Al-Madina expressed the conviction that restoration of peace in that Islamic country would remain a dream unless Soviet occupation forces withdraw unconditionally and give the people of Afghanistan the right to self-determination. The paper noted that the people of Afghanistan have already shown they are capable of rejecting Soviet occupation. It added that Afghans would continue to resist the invading forces and the treacherous elements in the country who allowed freedom of movement to Soviet forces and weaponry in Afghanistan.

In an editorial on the Islamic summit, Al-Yom said it would provide an opportunity for Muslims to cast a new glance at the future and the problems that have piled up before the Islamic world. The paper urged Muslim leaders to embark on a new course that would help them in tackling their problems and issues in a solid and effective manner. The paper conceded it would not be difficult to find solutions provided everyone exerts honest efforts in the achievement of the desired goals. It described the conference as "historic" since it would consider all Islamic problems and would work to find their solutions. It would be considered the highest Islamic congregation if it succeeds in adopting resolutions in conformity with the gravity of their problems, the paper added.

On the same subject, Al-Jazirah noted that the idea of holy war would be taken into consideration in resolutions of the conference, which also would determine joint action to liberate Jerusalem and to restore that legitimate rights of Arabs and Muslims everywhere. The call for the holy war would include action at military, political, diplomatic, economic, cultural and propaganda levels and would public opinion would have to be moulded in favor of Arab and Islamic rights.

Al-Riyadh also gave prominence to the significance of the Islamic summit and expected outcome of its deliberations. The importance of the conference lies in the fact that a complete preparation has been made to find solution to all the issues now bedeviling the Arab and Islamic world. The paper referred to the efforts of the Arab Reconciliation Committee and said that it has made satisfactory progress in its goodwill mission.

Record auction price

$5.2m for Da Vinci notes

By Leonard Downie Jr.

LONDON (WP) — American millionaire industrialist and art collector Armand Hammer recently bought the last privately owned handwritten notebook of Leonardo Da Vinci for $5.2 million, a record auction price for a manuscript or book.

estimate of the manuscript's value. But the auction house did little to actively discourage press speculation that it could sell for $10 million or even $20 million.

Soviet writer feels at home in U.S.

By Robert Kaiser

For 20 years, Vassily Aksyonov was a literary hero in the Soviet Union, read by millions of his countrymen. He wrote long stories about young people in love and several novels, including one about his youth as a medical doctor. He also wrote "for the drawer," as Russians put it — such as the novel The Burn, which he knew would never be officially approved by the Soviet Union.

So why does Aksyonov feel at home in America, where he has only spent a few months previously (as a visiting scholar in 1975)? "You know, it's a strange feeling — hard to explain. Maybe because I know the country. Maybe because I love American literature — I've loved American literature for many years, so perhaps the psychology here is more familiar. Maybe because I speak some English. And of course, this is a nation of immigrants. I have the feeling that I can communicate here — I can reach people... in America a foreigner can be quickly absorbed into the life of the country."

U.S. Democrats foil bid to cut spending

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 (R) — A new S. Congress took office, but the Republicans trying to flex their political muscle lost a first battle on the economy. Trying to back up President-elect Ronald Reagan's pledges to cut government spending, the Republicans in the House of Representatives Monday sought to limit spending to a maximum of 22.5 per cent of the gross national product in the next year. Government spending now runs at 23 per cent of GNP — the total of the nation's goods and services. Reagan has vowed to slash the federal budget by two per cent to his fight against inflation. But the Republicans lost in a 216-179 procedural vote in the House, where they gained a number of seats in the Nov. election, but where the Democrats still have a majority. In the same vote, the Republicans also failed in a bid to increase their representation on the House's Ways and Means Committee that originates all tax legislation. That is the panel that will have to deal with the tax cut expected to be the top priority of the Reagan administration. Although the Democrats have a House majority of 243-192 — a ratio of about five to four — they control the Ways and Means Committee by a majority of 23-12. This two-to-one ratio is about the same as in the last Congress before the Democrats lost more than 30 seats. In the Senate, the elections turned a 59-41 Democratic majority into a 53-47 Republican majority.

IFAD allocates $911m in loans to help poorest 3rd world states

ROME, Jan. 6 (R) — The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) has allocated $911 million in loans to help the poorest third world nations to grow more food, but has been able to hand out only $44 million. The Rome-based IFAD began operations three years ago with $1 billion donated by Western industrialized countries and Japan and by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). It is now starting a new three-year period with plans to lend further $1.5 billion to help poor countries feed themselves. But much of IFAD's money stubbornly remains in the bank. "Disbursements are low," an IFAD official admits. "But it is a ridiculous illusion to think that you can suddenly start an irrigation scheme."

only ask for reimbursement from IFAD later, sometimes after a lapse of many months, the officials added. The entire process of putting a loan into action frequently takes several years. Out of IFAD's 60 loans approved so far, 20 were authorized in late 1980 and of the remaining $40 worth $626 million 35 have started to become effective. IFAD says it is speeding up its procedures, but adds that its efficiency is comparable to that of other agencies or governments starting to give loans for third world agriculture. IFAD is now entering 1981 hoping that its "replenishment" of funds will be settled by OPEC without any problems. At an IFAD council meeting in December, agreement was reached that the fund should use an extra $1.5 billion during 1981-83, but the industrialized and OPEC nations argued over the percentage each should pay. The industrialized countries have always said that the split should be 50-50, but OPEC's contribution in the first 1977-80 period was 43 per cent while the industrialized countries paid 57 per cent. For the second three years, the industrialized countries insisted they would contribute only 51 per cent, but OPEC balked at 49 per cent and seems likely to continue paying 43 per cent. OPEC countries are expected to discuss their contribution at a meeting in Vienna later this month.

Wall Street Stock market bounces ahead as 2 banks lower prime rate

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (R) — The Wall Street stock market has bounced ahead as two leading banks lowered their prime interest rates to 20 per cent and money-supply figures showed a sharp decline. Morgan Guaranty Trust, the fifth-largest U.S. bank, Monday reduced its prime rate to 20 per cent from 21.5 per cent, undercutting other major banks by half a percentage point. The decline in the base rate on business loans from the record 21.5 per cent level began Dec. 23 with a cut to 20.5 per cent at Chase Manhattan and Wells Fargo Banks. The cuts spread slowly among major lenders, mostly regional banks, by the end of the year. Last Friday, most of the nation's 10 biggest banks cut their prime rates to 20.5 per cent from 21.5 per cent. The prime is the rates banks usually charge on loans to their most credit-worthy corporate customers.

Morgan Guaranty did not move until Monday, but announced an immediate reduction of 1.5 percentage points to 20 per cent. Manufacturers Bank of Los Angeles also went to 20 per cent from its former 20.5. Wall Street moved higher with the Dow-Jones average gaining 12 points after few figures showed that U.S. money supply fell substantially in the latest week and a disclosure Friday that there has been a decline in New York business loans. Analysts said the figures gave hope that the Federal Reserve Board (central bank) will not need to tighten credit further to check money-supply growth in the short term. Loan demand from big corporations remained strong in much of December, in part because they often can afford to pay higher rates than smaller companies, at least for a time, analysts said.

45 rich, developing states accept Tokyo GATT accords

GENEVA, Jan. 6 (R) — Twenty-six industrial nations and 19 developing countries have accepted one or more of the international agreements worked out in the "Tokyo round" talks here to reduce non-tariff barriers to world trade. This was announced Monday by the secretariat of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which sponsored the 90-nation talks originally launched in Tokyo. The agreements covered customs valuation, government procurement, subsidies and countervailing duties, technical barriers to trade, import licensing, and anti-dumping measures. GATT said all the Tokyo round agreements on non-tariff trade barriers were now in force. A customs valuation code and an agreement increasing international competition for government contracts came into effect Jan. 1. GATT added that the Tokyo round nations also made the second of the annual tariff cuts agreed in the negotiations. Yearly reductions are to continue for another six years to reduce industrial nations' import tariffs by an average of one-third on manufactured goods.

BRIEFS

WASHINGTON, (AFP) — A World Bank spokesman has implicitly denied that his organization had refused to grant India a $250-million loan to set up a fertilizer plant, as some Indian newspapers had reported. The spokesman said Monday that a loan had been sanctioned, but had never become effective. TOKYO, (AP) — Japan has agreed to provide Egypt with nine billion yen ($43 million in credits to be used for development of steelworks, agriculture and electricity, the foreign ministry here has announced. The credits will carry an annual interest rate of three per cent and are repayable in 30 years with payments to start after a 10-year grace period, the announcement Monday said. WARSAW, (AP) — A recently discovered oil deposit at Daszewo could be the largest in Poland, the Polish news agency Pap has said, quoting Piotr Karowski, assistant director of Poland's gas and oil exploration company. The oil deposit, found in December in the Baltic coastal region of western Pomerania, is sulphur-free and geologists were continuing to search for oil and gas deposits at much lower depths, Karowski Sunday said. MOSCOW, (AFP) — Oil containing large amounts of vanadium, which is used in the production of special steels, has been found on the east bank of the Caspian Sea, the Soviet Tass news agency has reported. The discovery is on an area of land known as the Buzachi peninsula. The rare find has recently been exploited for industrial purposes and experts are working on the technology necessary for separating the vanadium for use in the steel and engineering industries, the report said Sunday. LONDON, (AP) — Unemployment in Britain will soar during this year, two surveys have predicted. London stockbrokers Philips

Moi, Obote agree on economic links

AIROBI, Jan. 6 (AP) — Kenya and Uganda, one-time economic partners whose friendship was strained when former dictator Amin took power in Uganda, have agreed commercial and political cooperation.

shared public services and economic policies in the East African Community, one of Africa's pioneer attempts at regional cooperation. The Community broke up in 1977 as a result of differences between Amin and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, and between Socialist Tanzania and Kenya.

Giscard to lose election

PARIS, Jan. 6 (R) — Valery Giscard d'Estaing would lose the French presidency Socialist challenger Francois Mitterrand if elections were held now, according to a poll published by the newspaper Le Quotidien de Paris.

changed. Mitterrand's campaign theme that Giscard d'Estaing's autocratic behavior and the concentration of power in his hands made him virtually an uncrowned king was taken up by newspapers across the political spectrum.

It was the first time in the run-up to the 6-round elections, on April 26 and May 1, that Giscard d'Estaing has trailed in the polls. Opposition politicians and commentators greeted the news cautiously.

Shortly afterwards a poll showed 16 per cent of voters ready to back an earthy stage comic called Coluche, who announced he would stand for president on behalf of all those who were sick of the nation's political establishment.

Court orders quick probe

NEW DELHI, Jan. 6 (R) — India's Supreme Court has directed the government of the northern state of Bihar to speed up investigations against police alleged to have deliberately blinded 31 prisoners awaiting trial.

ordered firm action against those responsible after local newspapers revealed the blinding, carried out by piercing the eyeballs of prisoners with needles and pouring in acid. The Bihar government, run by Mrs. Gandhi's Congress (I) Party, started an inquiry and suspended 15 police officials but has since been accused of delaying tactics in the affair, which caused stormy scenes in the national parliament here.

PANA to rectify news

PARIS, Jan. 6 (R) — The new Pan African News Agency will have the task of correcting erroneous reports about Africa transmitted by the international news media.

Bihar counsel K.G. Bhagat told the court Monday the 24 cases had been instigated against police personnel, some of whom had been detained. But Chief Justice Y.V. Chandrachud said the investigation should not continue indefinitely.

Hand of Faith' gold nugget sale blocked

MELBOURNE, Jan. 6 (AP) — The Australian government has blocked the sale of the 27.2 kg. "Hand of Faith" gold nugget to a Las Vegas casino.

A spokesman of the Ministry for Home Affairs said the granting of an export license had been delayed until July in the hope of finding an Australian buyer.

TESTING GAS MASKS: A team of German scientists are busy performing tests involving the development of protective masks against toxic gases. These volunteer scientists undergo tough in-action tests. The tests are considered of great importance due to the increased dangers of poisonous gas.

Leftists' terms rejected

ROME, Jan. 6 (AP) — The government has rejected the demands for media access made by the Red Brigades terrorists who have threatened to kill a kidnapped judge.

by the Brigades. Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni presided over a police summit meeting in Rome to direct operations in the hunt for D'Urso, who was grabbed by the Brigades in Rome Dec. 12.

The Art of Circumvention South dealer. North-South vulnerable. NORTH ♠K108 ♦10742 ♣K753 WEST ♠1075 ♣KQJ6 ♠A83 ♣J84 EAST ♠96432 ♠54 ♠A83 ♠Q102 SOUTH ♠AK8 ♠AJ962 ♠95 ♠A96

The bidding: South West North East 1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass 3♥ Pass 4♥ Opening lead - king of diamonds. How do you guess which way to finesse for a queen when the finesse can be taken in either direction? There are players who enjoy solving such problems, but most mortals don't relish them at all. Take this case where declarer can make four hearts by playing West for the queen of trumps. He simply finesesses against West and winds up losing two diamonds and a club. But if he elects to finesse against East, he goes down one. Oddly enough, the best way of dealing with the problem is not to finesse at all. The problem can be resolved by circumventing it! Let's say East-West start out with three rounds of diamonds. Declarer ruffs and, since a club must be lost in any case, he concentrates all his energies on avoiding a trump loser. Instead of trying to guess the likely location of the queen - a 50-50 proposition - South directs his attention to other channels. He cashes three spades, discarding a club from dummy, then plays the A-K of clubs, ending in dummy. With five tricks to go - and having lost two tricks to date - he still has the A-J-9-6 of hearts and nine of clubs. Declarer now leads the ten of diamonds and ruffs it as East discards a spade. He then plays the nine of clubs. As a result of this method of play, the contract is now secure. It does not matter to declarer which opponent wins the club. He has the A-J-9 of trumps facing the K-10-8, and it is the defender's turn to lead. The queen is trapped regardless of what happens next. In effect, South makes no direct effort to locate the missing queen. He simply lets nature take its course.

Marketing Manager-Insurance

The largest insurance brokerage firm in Kuwait seeks a Marketing Manager to head up it's newly created field sales and marketing function.

This well established and professionally managed firm has been in the forefront of the rapidly developing insurance industry in the Middle East since it's inception. It's ambitious growth plans contemplate expansion throughout the region as well as the development of a truly international client base. This newly created position will be a key member of the team responsible for achieving these objectives.

The successful candidate will have five to seven years experience in direct sales of all branches of insurance with an emphasis on the marketing of personal insurance products. Experience with a major western underwriter or international brokerage firm is highly desirable. Fluency in both Arabic and English is required.

This is a truly exceptional career opportunity which commands an above average base salary, a very significant bonus opportunity and generous allowances. In addition, the successful candidate can expect accelerated career development beyond the initial assignment, leading to substantially greater responsibility in relation to performance.

Interested and qualified candidates should reply in complete confidence to:

Retain sanctions against Moscow

MOSCOW, Jan. 6 (AP) — Thomas J. Watson Jr., outgoing United States ambassador to the Soviet Union, has said that America should maintain its trade sanctions against Moscow until the Kremlin takes steps toward withdrawing its forces from Afghanistan. In an interview with the Associated Press Monday, Watson also said attempts to negotiate

U.S. cold wave plays havoc, kills seven

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (AP) — Frigid air howling down America's eastern seaboard was playing havoc with car batteries and fuel lines, boilers and water pipes from Maine to Georgia. At least seven deaths were blamed on the intense cold. Record low temperatures were matched by record high power demand in north Carolina, Virginia and Massachusetts. Thousands of distress calls were reported from stranded motorists and from apartment-dwellers without heat.

One man was found dead of exposure inside a parked car in Richmond, Virginia, where temperatures dipped to a record 6° F (15 C) Monday. An unidentified man was found frozen to death on a downtown Chicago sidewalk. A father and son in Boston were overcome by fumes from a gas space heater in their apartment.

Over the weekend as the cold swept down from Canada, three weather-related deaths were reported in Pennsylvania. Temperatures dipped below the freezing point over the weekend in parts of Florida, but only isolated, minor damage to citrus crops and vegetables was reported.

Dollar declines, gold is mixed

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP) — The dollar fell on world foreign exchanges for the second consecutive day Tuesday, on the heels of declining U.S. interest rates. It reached a 23-month low in Tokyo. Gold prices were mixed.

London's five bullion houses fixed a recommended morning gold price of $599.25 a troy ounce, down from 602 at the close Monday, but in Zurich, the metal traded at a median $599.50, up from 595.50. Earlier in Hong Kong, gold closed at 600.60, up 5.94, after finishing at $593 in New York late Monday afternoon. Silver was quoted in London mid-morning at $16.30 an ounce, unchanged.

The dollar fell to a 23-month low in Tokyo, dropping below 200 yen for the first time since February 1979. It closed at 199.60 yen, from 201.40 Monday, after repeated Bank of Japan intervention to prevent the yen from appreciating too rapidly. At one point the dollar fell to 198.70 yen, dealers said, forecasting even further decline on the strength of the Japanese economy's productivity and low inflation rate. One European dealer added that the yen's sharp gains "shouldn't be surprising given their strong industry and their ability to sell petrochemical knowledge for oil."

London dealers speculated that OPEC countries were putting more oil cash into the yen, boosting the Japanese currency. The dollar recovered slightly by mid-morning in Europe after a lower opening. In London, the pound was worth $2.4295 (2.4165), a gain of more than one cent against the dollar after a large 3½-cent leap Monday.

The dollar's weakness is almost wholly attributed to the recent decline in U.S. interest rates, making euro-dollar and other dollar holdings less attractive to investors.

Dog dug out alive

AVELLINO, Italy, Jan. 6 (R) — A wire-haired terrier named Reno was dug out alive Tuesday from the ruins of his home here, 43 days after it was destroyed in November's earthquake. A fire brigade spokesman said Reno's owner, a 19-year-old girl, remained to look at the remains of the home and heard faint whining under the rubble. She called the firemen, who found the dog, skeletal but alive, in a hole where he had survived by drinking water.

major changes in the U.S.-Soviet SALT II treaty would be time consuming and would "just put ourselves and the world in more jeopardy than we are today."

Watson, a Carter administration appointee who will leave his post this month, said it is too early to lift the partial embargo on sales of grain and high technology to the Soviet Union. The embargo was part of President Carter's response to Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan in Dec. 1979. Some 85,000 Soviet troops remain in the central Asian nation.

"Until the Soviets demonstrate some willingness to behave as the international community indicated it thought they should behave... I believe we should stay where we are with the actions we took," he said. President-elect Ronald Reagan has criticized the grain embargo as harmful to American farmers and said Friday that he would give a "great deal of study" to ending it. Watson, 66, said he would prefer that an end to sanctions be linked with a "political settlement in Afghanistan" that included the withdrawal of Soviet forces.

"I don't want you to think that I think the trade thing has been completely effective," Watson said, noting that American allies have picked up some business that the U.S. let drop. "But I still think that what we've done was right." Watson, who served before his appointment to Moscow as chairman of a presidential committee on disarmament, said he thought Reagan could win "modest changes" from the Soviets on SALT II.

"On the other hand, if we're really going to try to go back and renegotiate it, or get it folded into SALT III or something like that, I predict that this will take a long time and that if we try to do it — with major changes or a new treaty — we will just put ourselves and the world in more jeopardy than we are in today," he said.

He predicted American demands for changes would prompt Soviet counter-demands. Scrapping the treaty, he said, could spark a new arms race. Watson said he thought it would be impossible to win a thermonuclear arms race with the Soviet Union and characterized such a race as "pointless."

He said the Soviet Union "can reduce the standard of living here substantially" to finance an arms race. "These are a very obedient of people," he said.

Waldheim to open Geneva talks today

GENEVA, Jan. 6 (R) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was due to arrive Tuesday for a multi-party conference which, if successful, could bring independence to Namibia (South-West Africa) by the end of the year.

But failure would almost certainly result in escalation of 14-year-old bush war between South African-led forces and the Marxist-oriented black nationalist guerrilla movement, the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO).

Spokesmen for SWAPO and the ruling internal Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DTA) have said they want a constructive meeting leading to the implementation of a U.N.-backed plan for a ceasefire, elections seven months later under U.N. supervision and independence for the former German colony.

But the multi-racial DTA, which won elections in the territory just over two years ago which were not recognized internationally, has strong doubts about U.N. impartiality. Its delegates have demanded equal status with SWAPO and all other parties here and in all future negotiations.

SWAPO spokesman Theo-Ben Gurirab, who represents the organization's observer group at the U.N., said Monday its sincerity and determination in seeking an early settlement was demonstrated by SWAPO chief Sam Nujoma heading his 25-man team.

He did not appear to attach crucial importance to the seating arrangements, but said the conference could help to clarify two aspects — a ceasefire date and the timing for replacement of the 7,500-strong U.N. force which would supervise the peace plan.

Gurirab sprang a surprise by saying SWAPO had asked Waldheim to use his influence to secure the release of SWAPO leaders detained by South Africa, including Toivo Ja Toivo, so that they could attend the Geneva talks.

But observers believed this was more of a move to embarrass the South Africans than a last-minute condition.

However, the seating arrangements and the absence so far of any set agenda could bring tough procedural wrangling as soon as Waldheim formally opens the conference Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a representative of the Namibian internal parties, Farvev Kozonqvizi, told reporters they sought a status at the talks equal to that of SWAPO.

Up to now, the Turnhalle Alliance was to attend under the wings of the South African-appointed Administrator General of Namibia, Denie Hou.

The United Nations has recognized SWAPO as the "sole and authentic representative" of the people of Namibia. SWAPO considers the Turnhalle Alliance as "puppets" of South Africa, but reluctantly agreed to what the U.N. officially terms a "multi-party" ... pre-implementation meeting.

Viet mortar bombs hit Thai hamlet

BANGKOK, Jan. 6 (R) — Thailand charged Tuesday that five villagers were injured and three houses damaged when three Vietnamese mortar bombs landed near a border hamlet on Thai territory. The military supreme command said the 82mm mortar rounds hit houses about 30 meters inside Thailand Monday, possibly as a result of fighting between Vietnamese-led forces and the Khmer Rouge across the border.

Thailand has lodged a protest with Vietnam over a 90-minute clash between Thailand and Vietnamese-led forces last Saturday in which two Thai soldiers were killed and a third wounded. Bangkok charged that a contingent of Vietnamese-led forces entered Thailand before being intercepted by Thai border guards.

Mintoff meets Italian P.M.

ROME, Jan. 6 (R) — Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff has conferred with Italian Prime Minister Arnaldo Forlani and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo about the projected agreement over Maltese neutrality. They exchanged information on passage through their parliaments of the ratification of the understanding of Sept. 1980, "an official statement said.

The project is now at the committee stage here. Under the draft agreement, Malta would declare its neutrality, including its refusal to join any alliance or to permit the establishment of foreign bases or the repair of Soviet or American ships in Maltese docks. A simultaneous Italian statement would recognize Malta's neutrality, ask other countries to respect it and guarantee consultations possibly leading to military aid if Maltese neutrality was threatened, Italian officials said.

Italy would provide $50 million as aid over five years, a $15-million credit for a joint industrial project and four million dollars a year for technical, scientific and cultural cooperation.

Grenade attack on Thai singer claims six lives

BANGKOK, Jan. 6 (AP) — Six people were killed and 80 others wounded when a man threw a hand grenade into a big crowd watching a folk singer performing at a temple fair in southeastern Thailand, a police officer said Tuesday. The police said Surachai Sombacharon, a well-known Thai singer, was the target of the killer but escaped miraculously because the grenade fell some distance away from him.

The incident occurred at Incheon Burin province, 80 km southeast of Bangkok. The attacker — who apparently had a personal animosity with the singer — was arrested, the police said.

The incident was the fourth criminal act involving grenades or bombs in Thailand in the past two weeks.

In another development, bodies of 17 people, believed to be Vietnamese refugees, have been found floating in the sea off the southern Thai province of Songkhla over the past 10 days, police said Tuesday. Two boatloads of refugees who arrived in Songkhla province on Dec. 27 told police that they had left Vietnam with four other boats which had later disappeared in heavy seas.

Train mishap kills 6

MADRID, Jan. 6 (R) — Six people were killed and 20 injured when a passenger train and a locomotive collided head-on Monday. The accident occurred near Miraflores de la Sierra, 45 km. north of here. The two-coach express train was traveling from Burgos to Madrid.

Iranian leader rejects fresh U.S. proposals

BEIRUT, Jan. 6 (AP) — A leading member of Iran's Islamic Republic Party, a primary source of hardline opposition to President Aholhassan Bani-Sadr's moderates, said Tuesday that the latest U.S. proposals on the hostage dilemma are "unacceptable."

Hassan Ayat, interviewed in Tehran by telephone from Beirut, also said he considers it "a very remote possibility" that the 52

American hostages would be freed before President-elect Ronald Reagan takes office Jan. 20.

He said a resolution of the 14-month-old hostages crisis "depends on America's policy on what kind of policy it will have during Reagan's tenure in office."

Ayat, a member of the Iranian parliament, said it is up to the U.S. officials "to make us trust them and be confident."

Ayat is not a member of the Iranian commission which is discussing the U.S. proposals with Algerian mediators. When asked if he had seen the American document or was fully aware of its contents, he did not answer directly. Instead he replied, "I have not studied it in detail."

However, Ayat said the latest U.S. proposals which were brought to Iran Friday by Algerian mediators and were being studied by members of Prime Minister Muhammad Ali Rajai's government, "were unacceptable and did not satisfy us, because they do not give enough guarantee to what we want."

The main stumbling block in the discussions is thought to be Iran's demand that the United States deposit $ 24 billion in the Algerian Central Bank — an amount designed to cover Iranian assets frozen in the United States following the seizure of the hostages, plus any other assets which the Iranians claim may turn up at some future date.

Talks with Jagielski spirited, says Walesa

WARSAW, Jan. 6 (AP) — Independent Polish labor leader Lech Walesa held a surprise meeting Monday with Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Jagielski on unresolved disputes and afterwards termed the talks "spirited."

Asked whether any issues were resolved during the four-hour session at the council of ministers building, Walesa said: "It depends on how you look at it." Walesa refused to answer further questions.

Union sources said issues under discussion included such unresolved matters as free Saturdays, collective bargaining procedures, alleged harassment of members in the provinces and access to media.

Walesa's union, known as Solidarity, has asked the government to reach agreement on the issues by Jan. 15.

Meanwhile, Polish newspapers sharply criticized remarks by Solidarity leaders and warned that the Polish army is concerned over continued social unrest in parts of the country.

Through Zolnier Wolnosci, the Polish army newspaper, the army has from time to time spoken against what it considers excesses in the name of liberalization and reform sweeping Poland since the summer strikes. The army daily blasted Solidarity deputy leader Andrzej Gwiazda for what it termed "anti-worker and anti-socialist" remarks made to the West German newspaper, Bild Zeitung, in December. It said Gwiazda told the German daily that democracy would prevail in Poland only when a multi-party system was introduced.

"Such statements as those made by Gwiazda can come only from one who does not understand Poland's historical experiences and who does not comprehend the current transformations," the newspaper said.

relations with the Arab countries we are aiming at strengthening our historical, cultural and moral ties and establishing productive cooperation in all fields that will serve our mutual interests. The progress in with these countries and the results attained through our cooperation with them during the recent years are a great source of satisfaction.

"We continue to hold the opinion that the long standing Middle-East problem can be brought to a just comprehensive and durable peaceful solution through the participation of all parties concerned in the negotiating process," he said. "Israel should withdraw to the pre-1967 borders and a final settlement must encompass the recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinians, including their right to establish an independent state," he added.

"In the light of these considerations no obstacle would remain for conducting normal relations with Israel, if she refrains from jeopardizing regional peace and from acts and practices determined to the interests and moral values of the regional countries and also if she implements the United Nation's resolution relevant to the Middle East problem," Ulusu, said.

About our relations with Western Europe and NATO he said the government attaches great importance to its membership in the European Council and its cooperation with the Council. "It is our most natural right to expect from our friends, and particularly from the statesman, of the European Council member countries to evaluate the situation of Turkey realistically, in the light of the particularities of the geographic area she lies in, and the events she has gone through in recent years," he said.
